PUTNAM COUNTY, TN - SHERIFF FARRIS BRINGS LOJACK STOLEN VEHICLE RECOVERY SYSTEM TO PUTNAM COUNTY

Sheriff Farris has entered into an agreement to participate in the LoJack Stolen Vehicle Recovery System, currently in operation in 29 states. The Putnam County Sheriff's Department will be the only Tennessee agency east of Lebanon to have this state-of-the-art technology. Our participation will be an additional part of the LoJack Stolen Vehicle Recovery Network to help combat the crime of vehicle theft.

Based on the agreement, the LoJack Corporation will provide the Sheriff's Department with four of the necessary police tracking computers, installation and training at no cost. Each system is valued at $2,000 each.

LoJack is the only provider of stolen vehicle recovery systems that is directly integrated with law enforcement. LoJack uses a proven and proprietary technology operating on a Radio Frequency allocated by the FCC for the recovery of stolen vehicles. When a vehicle equipped with a LoJack system is stolen, the first step is to have the vehicle's owner alert local law enforcement. Once officers record the theft in the national stolen vehicle database, a silent signal is automatically sent out that activates the LoJack system's transceiver hidden in the stolen vehicle. Law enforcement may then track the vehicle using Police Tracking Computers.

Sheriff Farris stated "use of this technology will allow our personnel to locate stolen vehicles, cargo and heavy duty equipment while out on patrol." He further noted that "it's important to locate stolen equipment without delay and use of the LoJack equipment can help us and hopefully lead to additional stolen vehicle recoveries and arrests."

An estimated 10,000 vehicles are located each year through use of the LoJack system by law enforcement.
